Forecast For Northwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Tuesday 02 Mar 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Feeling pleasant in any sunshine after a chilly start.

Today:
A chilly start for most with frost in places. Morning sunshine in the west of the region, with fog and low cloud further east being slow to clear. However, feeling pleasant in the more widespread sunshine by the afternoon. Maximum temperature 10 deg C (50 deg F).

Tonight:
Remaining largely clear, with fog and low cloud returning overnight for eastern parts. Frost likely forming overnight, with the greatest risk under clearer skies. Minimum temperature -2 deg C (28 deg F).

Wednesday:
Patchy cloud with intermittent sunshine. Generally, more sunshine in the morning with cloud thickening in the afternoon together with the odd shower further south. Chilly for some, notably further east. Maximum temperature 10 deg C (50 deg F).

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Cloudier on Thursday with some rain at times. Dry and sunny on Friday although feeling cooler. Turning cloudier and breezier on a chilly Saturday with a chance of rain too.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.